

Full-Time Professional Counsellor

Ryerson University | Posted: May 13, 2019; closes May 31, 2019

Location: Toronto, ON

The Opportunity

- requires registration to perform the controlled act of psychotherapy
- requires dual competencies in psychotherapy and career counselling

The Centre for Student Development and Counselling invites applications for two full-time Professional Counsellor positions, beginning September 1, 2019, subject to final budgetary approval. Ryerson is an incredible university with a fast-paced work environment. Counselling staff work within a stepped care model of service delivery with a mandate to provide assessments, community referrals, individual and group psychotherapy, and crisis intervention. We are seeking dynamic, innovative, evidence-informed clinicians with a client-focused approach to counselling including strong generalist counselling skills and ability to work with a diverse client population in a brief/short-term goal directed therapy practice model. Excellent clinical judgment and decision-making skills are required to deliver and evaluate counselling and crisis intervention services for students, including risk-assessment, crisis management, complex case management, outreach and referrals. Additional training in career development theories and clinical practice is of interest for these positions. Demonstrated ability to utilize therapeutic modalities and interventions to address career identity issues as they affect the post-secondary population and to create developmentally appropriate psycho-vocational group programs will be considered an asset.
